Such is a modern writer's picture of the Inquisition, the bloody tribunal which Rome, drunk with the blood of martyre, increase men, the result facility is the part of the p set up and operated when papal power the world's moral midnight was one with the neontide of the papery.

2240 Lincoln Avenue, Chicago, Ill. The Inquisition was introduced into Spain, the scene of its perfection, in 1233. The Dominicans were the strongest of Romish orders in that territory, and naturally made most of the institution invented by their sainted founder. in twenty years the bloody reign of terror extended to every corner of the nation which included what is now known as Portugal.

Pope Innocent IV was pleased, and in 1254 granted additional privileges to the Dominicans as an order, and to their most beloved members, the inquisitors. One of the extraordinary prerogatives granted the Inquisition at this time was the permission to take depositions of ses though their names were un-For another twenty years the known. rack and fagot flourished. When an inquisitor had been appointed, and was ready to proceed with his work for the greater glory of the "true faith," one of his first acts was to publish an order requiring all persons guilty of heresy to come into court and confess. performance of a light penance.

Those who were necused but failed to appear within a specified time were arrested and placed in confinement. In due time these were examined, and their answers compared with the accusations made against them. Confession and the performance of a penance sometimes earned release; but failure to confess invariably resulted in denunciation as an stinate heretic.

If the accused person denied all the charges, he was furnished with a copy of them; but the names of the informer and witnesses were withheld. If he persisted in denying every charge, he was tortured. It sometimes happened that these who went through the torture were acquitted; but it was not deemed necessary to renler them an indemnity or to reveal the identity of their false accusers.

The union of the various kingdoms of Spain under Perdinand and Isabella (patrons of Christopher Columbus) favored renewed activity on the part of the heretic hunters. In the city of Seville were many Jews who had outwardly con-formed to the requirements of Rome, to save their lives, but who secretly adhered patent machine, which makes one pint of milk into one pound of hutter (making two pounds) in two minutes, 100 percent to accents. The burning and banishment of these was so profitable that from that year, 1481, the persons most sought for were persons of standing and wealth from whose friends or estate it might be possible for the ecclesiastical tribunal to wring ransom or otherwise

The burning of prominent lawyers, and even of those who held high position in the church, threw such terror into many confessed and actual hereties that they fled for safety to wherever they could The flight of many was intercepted, and they were brought back to satisfy the thirst for blood as well as to lose their property.

It is at this point that Ferdinand and Isabella, king and queen of Spain, shine in history. It was under their joint rule and encouragement that the persecution of the Jews and Moors of Seville, and other Spanish cities, took place. Plots against him in Spain and in Rome kept the bloody inquisitor in trouble. Even the pope was alarmed at the barbarity of the brute who had gone the limit in preserving the purity of the faith by approved methods. Nevertheless he was able to maintain his position against the resentment and righteous indignation of his enemies; and has come down to us in history as the most successful servant of the Roman Catholic Church who ever undertook the destruction of Protestants and heretics, and at the same time as the most hated and cruel enemy of civilization.

The next installment of the series will deal with his successors and their brutal treatment of the great Galileo.
